Hollowell Case Will Be Taken Up Again in Two Weeks.

LOUISVILLE JURORS.

Judge Scores Jurymen Who Held Out Against Damages for Victims.

Paducah, April 25.—The Federal jury in the damage suit of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Hollowell, alleged victims of night-riders, could reach no verdict, and was discharged. Mr. and Mrs. Hollowell say that after being beaten they were forced to flee the country. They sued for $50,000 each in Federal Court. W. A. Gresham, of Lyon county, and W. H. Cherry, of Carlisle county, held out against damages, though the other ten favored a $40,000 verdict.

Judge Evans, who tried the case, severely scored the two jurors, and said the honor of the State demanded some verdict, and that one of the cases will be tried May 11 with Louisville jurors. He said if only one man had hung the jury he would institute an investigation, as he had learned one man on the jury had concealed his relationship to one of the defendants. He added that in the next trial there would be a fair and impartial jury, and that no association man will be allowed on it. He also severely criticised the so-called alibis of the 28 defendants.

CAPT. GIVENS

Want Continuance.

Attorneys Headley, Yost and Laf-foon, who have been engaged to defend the men under indictment at Murray on the charge of night riding, have forwarded an affidavit to Judge Cook requesting a continuance on the grounds that they have other engagements and have no time to prepare the cases for trial. They are set for today.

40 ADDITIONS TO BAPTISTS.

Revival Shows No Let-up In Interest as Third Week Begins.

19 JOINED LAST SUNDAY.

Rev. R. E. Neighbour Will Probably Leave After Three More Nights.

This will be the last week of the Baptist revival, unless the plans are changed. Dr. Neighbour announced Sunday night that he would leave Friday. Envelopes were distributed for free-will offerings to compensate Dr. Neighbour and the singer, Mr. Alpha I. Ruby.

There were three regular services Sunday and 19 persons united with the church, bringing the total up to 40. Some have joined other churches. Among the half dozen who joined the Baptist church Sunday night was Mr. Alpha I. Ruby, the musical director, who has been a member of another church, but has become dissatisfied on the subject of baptism and desires to be immersed. He stated that he had no settled home, being engaged in revival work all of his time, and wished to unite with the Hopkinsville church for the present.

Dr. Neighbour's congregation Sunday was not so large as usual, owing to the rainstorm, but both rooms were comfortably filled. For once the men outnumbered the women. The sermon was on the downfall of Abasalom and was directed largely to young men.

ANOTHER REVIVAL

Will Be Started at Christian Church Next Week.

Evangelist SELLERS.

On Sunday May 3rd a revival will begin at the Ninth Street Christian church. Rev. L. E. Sellers, of Terre Haute, Indiana, will preach and Prof. J. E. Sturgis, of Butler, Indiana, will conduct the music.

Both are men of reputation and well known in their respective departments of service.

BURIED HERE.

Funeral Services of Frank W. Bu kner Sunday Morning.

The body of Frank W. Buckner, who died in Jackson, Miss., Friday, was brought to this city Saturday evening and buried from the Baptist church at 10 o'clock Sunday. After a short and appropriate service by Rev. Millard A. Jenkins, a long procession followed the remains to Riverside cemetery where the services were concluded. The floral offerings were numerous and very handsome.

THE DULUTH GAS FRAUD.

The Results of the Economic and Enterprise of a Private Company Claimed by the Municipal Management of the Gas Plant of Duluth, Minn.

To those unfamiliar with the facts the reports assiduously circulated about the gas department of Duluth would give the impression that the profits reported are the result of municipal operation. This is, however, far from the truth, for in 1904 the city shut down the generating plant which it had purchased only six years before, and since that date it has been merely a distributor of the gas made by a private company.

During the five complete years (1900-1904) the city made its own gas at a storage cost, per thousand feet was $1.20 and the receipts $1.17. In these cost figures there is no allowance for depreciation, lost taxes, accidents, legal services, etc. A very moderate allowance for these would greatly increase the loss per thousand, and if private enterprise had not come to its relief the gas plant would have ultimately proved a grievous burden, although so far as possible it had been removed from political influences.

The reduction in price of gas made by the city while it was operating the plant were due largely to the great increase in demand resulting from the rapid increase in the use of gas for fuel purposes as well as to improvements in the art of manufacture, but in no case were they warranted, for the real cost was always in excess of the set price.

The reduction in price since the city abandoned the manufacture of gas is due to the private enterprise of the making plant which supplies gas as a byproduct to the city and which has spent many thousands of dollars in exploiting the gas to increase its sales. As a gas expert who has no interest in this company writes:

"Of course this is very due for the citizens of Duluth, but it is not municipal ownership, as the city is freed from the two factors which ordinarily are the worst features of municipal plants—to wit, lack of proper handling of the manufacturing end of the business and lack of push in exploiting the commercial side. In short, the city of Duluth simply distributes the gas and collects the bills."

CITIZENS AS STOCKHOLDERS.

A Point of View That Ought to Be More General if Our Cities Are to Be Properly Managed.

The Saginaw (Mich.) Courier-Herald has this to say of the municipal waterworks:

"Will any one deny that if the plant had been owned by private capital it would not have been bankrupt long ago? And what would have resulted to a franchise owning corporation running the system? It would years ago have been driven out of the town or have been compelled to furnish a water service the best that could be obtained."

"A live progressive water commission two years ago tried to induce the taxpayers—the stockholders—to vote money to improve the operating plant, to put it into good condition and equipment, to make possible a service to consumers of a water supply for all purposes adequate to modern uses and needs. Their efforts went for naught; the attempt was an utter failure. The owners—the taxpayers—absolutely refused to improve the plant, although it was clearly shown that the improvements would actually pay for themselves in increased business in a reasonable time."

"And the system been owned by a private corporation it would have been compelled by the very voters who refused to get the money somehow, somewhere, put the entire plant in modern condition or get out of the business altogether, no matter what financial loss might fall upon it."

GOOD MUSIC A FEATURE

Will Play Prominent Part in the Coming Confederate Reunion.

SEVERAL BRASS BANDS.

The U. D. C. Will Hold Convention During The Reunion.

Birmingham, April 24.—Music will play a prominent part in the Confederate Reunion to be held in Birmingham, June 9, 10 and 11, 1908.

The Committee on Music has been especially active in arranging a successful program for the occasion.

"A number of bands have been engaged; two choruses are now in training under the direction of Philip Memoli, one an adult chorus of 250 voices, and the other a children's chorus of 400 voices. Three public concerts will be given during the reunion, thus affording an opportunity to the visitors to enjoy rare musical treats.

Local talent will be reinforced by the acquisition of noted singers and instrumentalists from other cities. The United Confederate Choirs of America will hold their convention in Birmingham during the reunion, and have been assigned a place on program. The Association, although a little over one year old, has membership in a number of States, and bids fair to be one of the great patriotic societies. It is unincorporated, and the members are selected because of vocal qualifications.

Polly's Ruse.

A Washington Story
By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1907, by Frank H. Sweet.

ONE blustering spring day in 1781 three young men were the only passengers in the northbound mail stage which ran three times a week between New York and Boston. Could Caleb, the Jolly driver, have known the business of such of the travelers he would have had interesting gossip indeed for the people along his route.

The straitlaced appearance, spectacles and bushy air of the tallest of the trio marked him a parson. The second, whose hair was fiery red, appeared like some merchant's apprentice. Such might also be the third, though his clothing was homespun and his manner more like that of a country youth.

This last passenger during the first part of the journey through Connecticut remained inside the coach with the others. But after leaving Hartford he sat outside with the good natured driver, who was quite ready to reply to questions about the country.

The two inside threw off their reserve when the courtly looking youth forsook their company.

"My glasses hurt my eyes," said the seeming preacher, removing his spectacles. "Now that the bumpkin has left us you can tell me your errand. I was authorized to see you get aboard at New York, Crane."

"He whom you are pleased to call the 'bumpkin,' my sagacious friend," said the red haired Crane, "is none other than the special express of Mr. Washington with a message from headquarters."

"Surely you are jesting!" said the clerical looking man.

"But I am not," rejoined Crane. "Yesterday this precious rascal had a long conversation with his chief in his marquee, and then prepared for his journey. I was ordered to follow this fellow and if possible learn his mission. Follow him I will therefore, if it takes me a thousand leagues."

"I do not envy you your task," said the other, rubbing his eyes. "I was never made for this sort of business, but you were. I was very comfortable in camp when I received orders to deliver a letter in Boston."

Meantime Caleb, the driver, had given his agreeable questioner much information, and the two were fast friends when Springfield was reached, where Caleb was to stay till next day. Caleb's old leader needed shoeing. The blacksmith shop was across the ferry on the west bank of the great river. Thus Caleb could say truthfully, "My good sir, no trouble at all," when his new acquaintance asked the way to the old Boatman's tavern, where lived young Mistress Polly Day, whom the courier said he wished to see.

In less time than it takes to tell it Washington's young subaltern had de-

"SURELY YOU ARE JESTING!" SAID THE clerical looking man. "I have just delivered into Miss Polly's shapely little hands the precious packet bearing the private seal of the commander in chief of the Continental army. This letter was not unexpected by Polly. Indeed, her brother, commonly called 'Captain John,' on leaving his home for Boston a few days earlier had explained at length what was to be done in case such a package should be delivered to her."

"Any message the general may wish to send me," said Captain John, "will surely be a letter written to you, Polly. I have told him how patriotic you are, and he is willing to trust much to your sagacity. You must find some safe means of getting the message quickly to me. Remember to send me the whole of the letter the general sends you, on that portion of it which is left white a secret message for me will be written in a peculiar ink, visible only when brushed over with a certain liquid."

"What liquid?" said Polly, who had her share of curiosity.

"Never mind, Polly. I have a vial of it. You should write me a good sisterly letter. Send the more important message in some safe hiding place or by some trusty hand to which you can usually allude. But make the reference so slight that it cannot be easily discovered if your letter should chance to fall into the enemy's hands. Address it to Uncle James Daggett's inn, Market square, Boston."

With that Captain John disappeared. Washington's messenger, having partaken of some of the sparkling cider and incomparable gingerbread with which Polly's larder was always supplied, made his bow and departed to cross the river and return to his command.

Then Polly fairly flew to her little room, where she read with eagerness the following letter:

Newburg, N. York, 24 March, 1781.

To Mistress P. Day,
In behalf of the Command of which yr. friend Capt. Day is esteemed Member, I beg to express the pleasure my Company has found in the frequent evidence of your Loyalty and Handiwork which have been sent to us. Hardly was the yarn shawl and the hose furnished by you and your Thoughtful Friends your own most savory loaves of gingerbread are worthy of special mention. Permit me to remark that those who add in making the lot of my soldiers happier in their camp-life are conferring a special favor upon yr. Most Obedt. Hing.

O WASHINGTON, Com'ding.

At this time two strangers, one elderly, the other middle aged, were guests at the old river tavern where Polly lived with her Aunt Nancy.

When Washington's messenger arrived, they had been two weeks under Aunt Nancy's hospitable roof. They had announced an intention to go to Boston by the following morning's coach, and Polly's first thought was to ask one of them to carry her brother's message.

But the more she thought of it the more she distrusted the austere stranger.

"No, no," she said to herself, "it would not be safe. But I see Caleb's room horse at the blacksmith's. I will get him to carry my little box of gingerbread to John in Boston."

She started through the garden gate, and there she met in the narrow path the elder of the two guests of the tavern.

"Mistress Polly," he said quickly, "I have sadly torn the sleeve of my topcoat. If I might make bold to ask your service, will you mend it for me before I go?"

"Certainly, good sir," she replied. "I shall be glad to do so as soon as I return from an errand to the blacksmith shop." And on she went.

"Caleb," she said with almost deference as if she were talking to Washington himself, "I want to send a box of gingerbread to my brother John in Boston by tomorrow's stage. If he cannot be found at Uncle James Daggett's inn on Market square, you may learn where he is. You must put it into his hands yourself, remember."

Caleb gladly consented, and after a few minutes' chat Polly tripped back across the field.

His eyes were not the only pair that watched her as she went. Their entire conversation had been overheard by a young man with red hair who had come with the last stage from New York.

"Oh, if I only had more time to think what is best to be done!" thought Miss Polly as she sat down to write to her brother.

Her face reflected the gravity of her thoughts as she fulfilled her promise of sending the message to the tavern in the light that evening. Both of the two strange guests were present, and so was Aunt Nancy. For some moments the elder guest watched her deft fingers in silence. Then, fixing his eyes upon her face, he said quietly:

"I hope the young man who came to-day brought you no bad tidings."

"Oh, none at all!" said Polly quickly.

"I will tell you why I asked," he went on after a moment's pause. "To-night from where I sit I have twice seen a young man about the same age as the one who called today approach the rear of the house as if looking for some one. Does he look for you?"

Polly started, perceiving. A response was on her lips when—crash! down came an earthen bowl in which a plant was blooming. It had been knocked from some upper window, and its fragments scattered close to the doorstep in the hard, smooth garden walk.

"Polly Day! Who's in your room?" cried Aunt Nancy.

The older guest started up the stairway and reached the upper landing just in time to see a slender young man half run, half slide, down the long sloping rear roof.

After the premises had been thoroughly examined and the still excited old lady had been led back to her seat Polly held up a small, square parcel which the intruder had dropped as he sprang from the roof.

"See!" said Polly, holding up the package. "The man only tried to get the box of gingerbread that I had all ready to send to Brother John by tomorrow's coach. Poor man! Perhaps he was hungry."

Caleb called bright and early the next day for his two passengers and the parcel. The neat little package for Captain John Day was stored carefully away in the leather stage box upon which the driver sat. The red headed man sat by Caleb on the box.

"Major, what think you of the outside passenger?" said the younger of the two guests.

"I did not observe him closely."

"He is Crane."

"What? Crane, the spy? Surely you are misinformed. But, no; now I understand."

"What do you mean?"

"It was he who tried to steal Miss Polly's gingerbread."

When Captain John Day received word from his uncle that a man with a parcel awaited him at the inn in Market square, Boston, he lost no time in appearing.

This face of Caleb was a useful one as he handed the captain his sister's package. He had had, he said, a red headed young man on the box seat with him as far as Worcester, and then his passenger had unexpectedly departed. What had become of him he did not know. But after Worcester was passed he had discovered that the box of gingerbread had been tampered with.

Captain Day merely thanked Caleb for his pains and took the box.

He found within the torn wrappings only a few crumbs of gingerbread, but there were two written messages. One was scrawled on the torn wrapper of the box itself, and the other was Pol-ly's letter, but there was no sign of any communication from General Washington.

"SOUNDS! JAMES, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THAT?"

The scrawled note on the wrapping paper bore neither date nor signature and read as follows:

The Exigencies of War demanded that I should open your precious Box, and the cravings of Appetite constrained me to eat up the Uncommonly good Gingerbread baked by your most Charming sister, Mistress Polly. The least I can do is to send you her letter, since there is nothing in it I can use!

The idea of my taking several days' journey into the interior simply to learn the information that Mr. Washington had written a Note of thanks to a girl! But I must not dwell on the Virtues of the Gingerbread! Never was there better! A thousand Thanks! A thousand Pardons! And Farewell!

Polly's letter was mainly a diary of small events at the tavern since her brother's departure. There was much unimportant information about the state of Aunt Nancy's health, and then Polly said:

There must be much want in the country about for a poor young man, starved, no doubt, tried vainly last night to steal my box of Gingerbread, made for you. There have been two fine Gentlemen staying at the tavern, and that reminds me that you will have Pleasure in learning that your little sister is improving much in the Art of Needlework. I wish that you might see the nice Bit of Sewing that I had the Honour of doing on the Top Coat of the Elder of these Two Gentlemen, who have both gone to Boston by this stage. It was the Sleeve of his Top Coat, near the Shoulder; and he declared when it was done that it was impossible to discern where the Rent had been.

If you should chance to meet this Gentleman, I trust that you will examine this piece of my Handiwork, and do not fail to send me by the Hand of Caleb any article of Apparel that you may wish me to mend during your sojourn in Newburg.

Nothing in this innocent note had excited the smallest suspicion on the part of the wary spy. But when Captain John Day read it he had no doubt as to certain where the two gentlemen were.

After a refreshing night's sleep and a hearty breakfast at the inn the two Politicians, the major and his lieutenant, prepared to stroll on Boston Common. As the weather was cold, the younger of the two, called James, brought down their topcoats.

His comrade, the major, unfolding his, uttered an exclamation of surprise and anger.

"Zounds! James, what do you think of that?" he said, pointing to a slit, evidently made by a sharp knife, in the topcoat near the shoulder.

The young man examined it closely.

"I should say," said he, "that you had been completely outwitted and doubtless made a convenience of by the little maid at the tavern in Springfield. See! Here she sewed the rent you had in the garment and cut out of this knife goes straight across it!"

"The mix had concealed some message in the sleeve!" said the other. "Her brother, the rebel captain, has been at this house."

"Without doubt, and his majesty's officer has been made the emissary of the rebel commander!"

Polly soon received from Newport a letter from her brother John containing these words:

Your Gingerbread, which I doubt not was very good, never arrived. Only by the kindness of the Enemy's spy did your letter reach me at all. Your plan of sewing the General's message to me into the very clothing of a British officer in disguise and on parole was indeed a most ingenious one. I managed to secure the paper without other trouble than cutting the cloth. Your woman's Wit, I verily believe, did save your Brother's Life.

A small sealed packet, addressed to "Mistress P. Day, Boatman's Tavern, at the Ferry, West Springfield, Massetta," arrived about a month later from New York. It contained a miniature engraved locket bearing a miniature portrait of the donor, George Washington. The message with it read simply:

In token of the Commander's appreciation of a valuable and successful performance.

NEED OF COUNTRY

TRIUMPH OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES IS IMPERATIVE.

THE MAN AND THE HOUR.

With the Nomination of John A. Johnson, Progressive Democrat of Integrity, Ability and Achievement, Success is Assured.

Wearied of 12 years of overwhelming defeat in national elections, during which time the party has lost national political control of every northern state and has witnessed devastating inroads even on the southern states, hundreds of thousands of Democratic voters have in the last few months asked: "Who is the man who can lead the party to victory?"

The best of armies, military or political, require some measure of success to maintain their spirit and efficiency. Confronted with overwhelming defeat, even in the worst of causes, disheartened the strongest men. Conditions are such in this year 1908, that a united Democracy, supporting a strong presidential nominee, can win the presidential office and open the way for a return of the Democratic party to power. Not only do the best interests of the Democratic party call for a victory this year, but also do the best interests of the nation. Twelve years of almost unopposed government of the republic by one party, and for eight of those years practically by one man, have brought about conditions that are repugnant to the efficient and satisfactory administration of a government supposedly of the people.

Principle with Victory. Victory can be achieved this year, without sacrifice of principle, for the stand for principle that has been made with so much sacrifice by the Democratic party of the United States for the past dozen years. It is merely a question of changing leadership. Three times in succession our party has gone to defeat, because its leadership has not been able to inspire confidence in the masses of the voters, patriotic, progressive and sincere as that leadership has unquestionably been. The party is greater than its individual members, and greater than its leaders. The time has come when it should name its leader in a presidential campaign and no longer permit itself to be defeated by a sentimental, though heroic, devotion to a great name that has dominated it for a dozen years.

If in the ranks of the party there is a man whose principles, whose personality, whose success in political battles, whose actual achievements in legislation and statesmanship—and a man holding a commanding political situation—are such that victory under his leadership is indicated, is it not the duty of reasonable, thoughtful, devoted Democrats, desiring the success of their party, to follow him?

John A. Johnson. The friends of Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota, who have watched his remarkable career in recent years, as well as his impartial and judicious journalism throughout the country, believe that he is the man of the hour, the man in every way equipped to make a successful campaign, and afterwards to be a chief executive of the highest order. Let us briefly review his career. John A. Johnson was born in St. Peter, Nicollet county, Minnesota, July 28, 1851, of Swedish parents. His childhood and youth were passed in great poverty. At 13 years of age, he was compelled to leave the public schools of his native city, in order to support himself and the parental family. Though his formal education was thus early cut short, his self-education never stopped. A student at all times, a wide reader and a thoughtful one, Mr. Johnson, after some years of obscure toil as a druggist and grocery clerk and railway time-keeper, became at the age of 31 one of the editors of the Peter Herald. He soon became known as one of the ablest of Minnesota journalists and was recognized as one of the leaders of journalism in a state remarkable for the number, vigor and influence of its periodical press. As a country editor, he was gradually drawn into politics and in 1898 was elected a member of the senate of the Minnesota legislature, and his first public political work was as a member of that body. From the first, he was identified with various reform measures, which have since become law in Minnesota.

Wherever Gov. Johnson has gone, he has impressed men as being a man of making many friends and few enemies.

Gov. Johnson's Legislative Results. The governor recommended a permanent civil service law. The legislature gave it to him and the law was hardy dry on the document before he appointed a commission so strong in its personnel that the Republican senate resolved by a rising vote to confirm the appointments without delay, though without the power of confirmation, expressed by a rising vote in appreciation of the excellence of the governor's appointments.

In northern Minnesota are the great iron ore fields in the world. The state of Minnesota owns extensive areas of these lands. By lease they were largely in the hands of the United States Steel Corporation and the state was receiving only an insignificant income from its royalties. The governor advised the withdrawal of all such lands from mineral leases and came from the wealth of the privately owned iron mines. The governor recommended a royalty tax on the output of these mines. He did not get it, but the United States Steel Corporation bound itself as a substitute to establish a $30,000,000 steel plant at Duluth.

The newly created tax commission, together with the state board of equalization, which preceded it (the members of which were appointed by Governor Johnson), have in the four years of Governor Johnson's administration increased the assessed valuation of the steel corporation's iron ore holdings in Minnesota from $32,000,000 to $150,000,000.

The sleeping car companies of Minnesota have never paid taxes in Minnesota in proportion to their earnings. The governor recommended a change in the system of taxing these companies and a satisfactory law was enacted. Similarly, a rational law as to mortgage taxation was enacted.

Railway Regulation. Taking up freight rates, Governor Johnson in a powerful speech so exhaustively and conclusively exposed existing unequal and exorbitant rates that the railway companies voluntarily made a reduction of ten per cent. on train rates on their lines in northern Minnesota. By order of the railway commission, reinforced by subsequent legislation, this voluntary reduction was followed by a horizontal reduction in maximum freight rates of about 13 per cent. and there was created a new class of merchandise tariff in which the rates were reduced about 20 per cent. The railways took these reductions into the United States courts, by enjoining the attorney general of Minnesota from enforcing the law. This action has opened the door of the most important litigation involving constitutional interpretation that has come before the supreme court in this generation.

The Two-Cent Law. The enactment of the two-cent passenger tariff law was an example of Governor Johnson's clarity of action. He invited to address the Minnesota Editorial association, instead of making the usual platitudinous address on such occasions, "he exploded the two-cent bomb" and urged that an end be put to the giving of passes. He talked on the same subject to a convention of commercial travelers. Immediately the state was aflame with this innovation in railway legislation. When the legislature met, he asked for a law embodying this idea and the legislature quickly responded. Neighboring states followed with reductions, and now throughout the middle northwestern two-cent rate prevails.

About the time Governor Johnson came into office there was a widespread agitation for reciprocal demurrage laws, which would compel railroads to allow shippers demurrage charges for failure to deliver cars on time. Governor Johnson, ever desirous of popular progress, recommended such a law and got it.

Thanks to his initiative, the orders of the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse commission are now immediately effective, pending appeal.

In Defense of Labor.

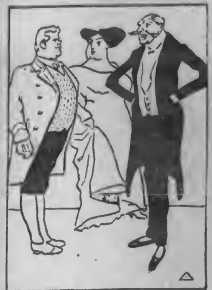

Governor Johnson, in consonance with his thorough democracy, and believing in equal rights, has not been neglectful of the interests of labor. He desired a free state employment bureau designed to eliminate the many abuses that have marked private employment bureaus in the great labor centers of Minnesota. Such a bureau was created and has been thoroughly helpful and widely efficient. Since time immemorial, that relic of feudalism, the common law doctrine of non-liability of employer to employee for injuries occurring through the negligence of a fellow servant has prevailed in Minnesota, as well as in many other states. "This ancient rule of the common law," said Gov. Johnson, "coupled with the other rule generally referred to as the doctrine of the assumption of risk by employees, has cast upon the individual laborer a risk and responsibility out of proportion to the wages he receives."

During his term of office Gov. Johnson has had to deal with one great conflict between labor and capital, namely, the strike of the miners on the Minnesota Iron ranges. By direct personal intervention, by advice to the employers on the one hand and the strikers on the other, the governor succeeded, without the use of state troops, in preventing violence and bloodshed. In the forests and prairies of northern Minnesota are great extents of fertile land, which, owing to lack of drainage, have not been available for cultivation. Thanks to Gov. Johnson, additional legislation on this subject has been secured, and hundreds of thousands of acres of fertile land will be added to the rolls of the state's wealth.

Gov. Johnson believes in the municipal ownership of public utilities and, following his suggestion, a modified form of the Illinois Mueller law was adopted by the Minnesota legislature. Under its provisions a municipality may bond its street railways or other public utilities to pay the cost of the purchase and operation of the same. Minnesota, a leading agricultural state, has long had to contend with the cordage trust, which has a practical monopoly of the binding twine used in harvesting. For many years the state has had a twine plant in which prison labor was employed. The trust erected a factory in Minnesota to compete with the state-made twine and Gov. Johnson's answer was, with the consent of the legislature, authorization for the state twine plant to sell its product outside as well as within the state. The cordage trust will now have to fight the cheap Minnesota state-made twine in other

THE SECRET OUT.

To refute the many false and malicious attacks, bogus formulas and untruthful statements published concerning Dr. Pierce's World-Famous Kidney and Bladder Pills, the Doctor has decided to publish all the ingredients entering into his "Favorite Prescription" for women and his equally popular tonic alterative known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Hereafter every bottle of these medicines leaving the great Laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., will bear upon it a full list of all the ingredients entering into the composition. Both are made entirely from native roots, of rare medicinal value. The ingredients of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" being Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Cherry root, and Bloodroot. The "Favorite Prescription" is prepared in a singular manner, from Blue Cohosh root, Lady's Slipper root, Unicorn root, Golden Seal root, and Batwallow root, these ingredients being macerated for a long time at a rather high temperature in a monstium composed of chemically pure glycerine of proper strength. The exact working formula for making these medicines cost one and a half centing each, chemists and pharmacists many years of study and experiment, but as perfected they produce almost perfect pharmaceutical compounds, embodying all the active medicinal principle existing in the ingredients employed, and this, too, in such changed in any climate. Thus the use of alcohol is entirely avoided.

PROOF POSITIVE.

Without solution, Mrs. H. Harrison, of 112 West 2d Street, Sioux City, Iowa, wrote us as follows:
"I suffered more than seven years with a very complicated form of female trouble accompanied with nervous prostration, and after doctoring with six physicians all bearing excellent reputations, was informed that unless an operation was performed I would be an invalid all my life. Hearing of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. R. V. Pierce's remedies, and believing that there must be a cure for almost every ailment, I determined to give one of your pills with a view to Dr. Pierce, and I will never regret my kindly advice, telling me to follow his instructions (faithfully and not to submit to an operation). I am now well, and in five months my improvement was so noticeable to friends that they began to inquire about my method of treatment. I was pleased to tell them of the wonderful power of cure that had most fortunately found, and as so many ladies applied to me for information, Dr. R. V. Pierce's world-famous medicines and his plans of treatment, I felt it duty bound to give them the benefit of my experience, so told them the facts. The large number of positive cures effected by Dr. Pierce's remedies alone used, with my recommendation, seemed to me a little 'Pellet' is a gentle cathartic. They never stop. By all druggists."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are largely a matter of good health, and good health is largely a matter of healthy activity of the bowels. Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation. They are safe, sure and speedy, and once taken do not have to be taken again. One little "Pellet" is a gentle cathartic. They never stop. By all druggists.

Gen. Williams at Murray.

Brig. Gen. Roger D. Williams is in Murray. The report that he is to go to Trigg county is probably erroneous, since County Judge Bingham has not requested troops. It is contended here that the soldiers would be subject to arrest if they went in to Trigg contrary to the wishes of the County Judge. However, there is some talk of Gen. Williams surrounding the county, but in order to completely accomplish this feat he would have to go into Tennessee.

Soldiers to Go Through Trigg.

Capt. Givens, of Company H, will leave tomorrow morning with eight soldiers and fifteen horses for Hopkinsville. On the route they will have to pass through Trigg county. The horses belong at Hopkinsville. The destination of Capt. Gibson and twenty-three soldiers, of Pineville, is Mt. Sterling, according to military officers here. They say the Pineville company will do duty in the Burley district.

Gen. Williams' Plans.

Paducah, Ky., April 24.—Movement of officers here indicates that Brig. Gen. Roger Williams will remain in Murray for some time, probably until after court day, next Monday, after which a redistribution of troops may be made.

Maj. G. W. Albrecht returned from the direction of Murray on an N. C. & St. L. train and left on an I. C. train toward Hopkinsville. He would not say where he was going. It is reported that Gen. Williams probably will make a personal inspection of the counties of Trigg and Christian as he has of Calloway. He has been out on horseback every day.

TAFT AND FAIRBANKS

Ran Neck and Neck In The County Contests Held Here Saturday.

2 CONVENTIONS HERE.

Hot and Furious Fighting Looked For When State Convention Meets.

Louisville, Ky. April 27.—The contest for control of Kentucky's vote is close and doubtful between Taft and Fairbanks. All but 126 delegates of Kentucky's total of 2,065 are reported. These show that should Fairbanks gain them all as well as those for which he is contending he will win Kentucky by a testing majority. Should Taft win only a reasonable number of them, however, and they belong to the Tenth and Eleven Districts mainly which were carried by Taft—and gain an average of those contested in Jefferson county, he will win. There seems to be little doubt that he will pick up his share of the 126 missing votes. His showing in some of these districts has been surprising, but only in the Second can it be safely said that he has won out.

First for Fairbanks.

The first on the face of the returns is for Fairbanks, but the Taft men said last night: "The First will be for us at convention, rulings all right."

The Third district seems to be close, with the odds in favor of Taft, while in the Fourth district Taft seems to have won, and Judge M. L. Heaverin, of Hartford, has beaten Dr. Ben L. Bruner for district committee. In the Fifth district 201 of the 217 delegates are contented. Here the Fairbanks men got sixteen delegates and Taft 201. In the Sixth district there is no doubt that Taft has won, while the Seventh seems to have lined up for him by a small margin.

The Eighth district is close, but the Ninth retrieves this by a decided Taft majority.

In the Tenth and Eleven districts several counties are missing, but it is practically certain that the Tenth will be found in the Taft column. Both sides are claiming it. Edwards seems to have swung the Eleventh safely for the Secretary of War.

Summary of Figures.

The latest figures follow. They are given in the numbers admitted by the other side, Fairbanks to Taft and Taft to Fairbanks. Contested votes are not counted in the totals, else Taft's total would be several hundred greater; in fact, easily enough to control the convention:

For Taft—788 to 800.
For Fairbanks—526 to 538.
Contested—435.
Divided—43.
Uninstructed—113.
Not Reported—126.
Total—2,055.
Counties for Taft—47.
Counties for Fairbanks—34.
Counties Contested—12.
Counties Uninstructed—6.
Counties Divided—4.
Districts for Taft—Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, eleventh.
Districts for Fairbanks—First and Second.
Districts Doubtful—Third and Fourth.

TWO CONVENTIONS HERE

Both Sides Played Sure Enough Politics.

Two conventions were held in Christian county. The Fairbanks side had the organization and secured the regular credentials while the Taft followers, apparently largely in the majority, had to content themselves with a rump convention, at which some hot speeches were made. The court house, which can have as many as 800 people packed into it when all are standing, was almost filled when the convention was called to order. As nearly as could be guessed by a Democrat in the gallery, Taft had about 500 and banks men got three of the five tellers, the chairman and secretary and played a waiting game. It was agreed to count the voters who wore badges—red for Fairbanks and white for Taft—wherever they were found and after the tellers had counted for an hour, some above and some below and some out in the streets unable to get in, the three Fairbanks tellers reported 969 for Fairbanks and 530 for Taft. There were hoots and cries of "Steal!" "Raw deal!" "Shame!" "Outrage!" etc., but the Fairbanks crowd perfected their organization, appointed 29 delegates and adjourned. The crowd divided and about 400 Taft men remained in the courtroom and held another convention, which was orderly and brief. Tellers were appointed with instructions not to let the number fall below 969 and the count was made as the voters left the building. The number participating in the second convention was found to be 1,108. When this report was made, the Fairbanks men complained that their tellers had been ridiculously conservative in their count that magnified 800 into only 1,499.

Both sides are still mad, but the Taft supporters seem to cuss the loudest, since it is evident that they will not be allowed to get any nearer the state convention than Henderson, where the district convention will meet to-morrow.

When a man writes as follows don't you think he means it? Mr. S. G. Williams, Powderly, Texas, says: "I have suffered for years with Kidney and Bladder trouble, using every preparation I came across and taking many prescriptions all with out relief until my attention was called to Pineales. After 30 days trial ($1.00), I am feeling fine. Money refunded if not satisfied. Sold by Anderson Fowler Drug Co., Incorporated."

POCKET PICKED.

J. H. Underwood Loses $35 in Saturday's Convention.

During the Republican convention Saturday, J. H. Underwood was relieved of his purse containing $35. It was in the left pocket of his trousers and the first intimation Mr. Underwood had that he had been robbed was when a Taft speaker jumped on a table and said there had been some stealing done. He examined his pockets to find that he had been made poorer during the excitement.

LaCenter, Ky., April 25.—Miss Birdie Mason, aged sixteen years, and Mr. William Meadows, aged about seventeen, both of Barlow, were returned to that city Monday night by detective Moore, of the Paducah police force, after an attempted elopement in the face of parental objections.

IN NEW ROLE.

Four Masked Bank Robbers Operate at Bandana, Ky.

Bandana, Ky., April 24.—Four masked robbers after taking possession of the Cumberland Telephone exchange and beating the operator into insensibility, compelled Assistant Cashier B. B. Hahn, of the Ballard county Bank, of Bandana, to unlock the bank and open the safe for them last night. The robbers got away with $3,000, leaving both Hahn and the operator bound in the telephone exchange, where they were rescued this morning. Rains during the night obliterated the trail and the only clue to the men is the statement of the hotel proprietor, who saw four men standing about in the direction of Ogden's Landing, five miles away on the Ohio river.

WELLS ROASTS EDITOR JENNINGS

Calloway Judge Is a Fighter Who Never Lets Up When Riled.

CHAPMAN IN CHARGE.

Middlesboro Soldiers Return Overland With Hopkinsville Horses.

Murray, Ky., April 27.—That O. J. Jennings, editor of the Murray Ledger, is "in sympathy with the night riders, and that that organization is proud of him and his paper" is the bold declaration of County Judge A. J. G. Wells in a lengthy statement, published in circular form and distributed among the big crowd in town Saturday.

The statement was brought forth by editorials in the Ledger this week in addition to an attack in a previous issue upon Judge Wells for bringing the troops into the county.

Capt. Chapman, commissary officer of the Third regiment national guards and Company C, of Owensboro, arrived here this morning from Paducah with 20 men.

Eight mounted men went across the river, starting from here at 3 o'clock this morning. It is probable that this is the beginning of the exodus of the mountain soldiers, leaving the Owensboro boys here to guard Calloway.

POD POINTERS.

Miss Hammonds Victim of a Serious Accident.

Pod, Ky., April 25.—Farming operations which had been checked by continued rains were resumed this week and corn planting was under way when again checked by the rain yesterday morning.

Messrs. W. Franklin & Co., dealers in general merchandise, have discontinued their branch store at this place, after greatly reducing their stock they moved the remnant to their headquarters near Macedonia. Our P. M., Jas. W. Bennett, has assumed the management of the business and Mr. J. Walden Bowling will succeed him as P. M.

An accident which might have resulted seriously occurred in the family of Mr. Lee Cranor a few days ago. Mrs. Cranor and her 18-month-old baby were walking in the yard and passed a lot of lumber that had been set up on end to dry. Mrs. Cranor noticed that the beam supporting the lumber was giving way. Just then her baby, who was in front, toppled in the way of the declining lumber. While the lady was trying to rescue her baby the lumber fell with stunning effect upon her and the child. Mrs. Cranor was weighted to the ground where she was imprisoned for several minutes, till her cries for help brought some of the near neighbors to her rescue. The child escaped through an aperture with slight bruises. Mrs. Cranor was so stunned and benumbed that she was unable to walk to her room. Mr. Cranor was away from home and the larger children were at school. The child would in all probability have been killed had the mother not been near and gone to its rescue. Mrs. Cranor has about recovered from her injuries, which fortunately were not of a very serious nature.

Miss Carrie Hammonds, daughter of Mr. J. G. Hammonds, met with a serious accident last Monday. She went to the field where her father was rolling logs. Mules were attached to a heavy log which was being rolled up a skid-way. When the log was near the top of the skid-way the chain slipped and the log rolled back. The girl was standing near the foot of the skid-way and one of her lower limbs was caught between the log and a stump and broken in two places below the knee. The limb was badly lacerated and the bone crushed. Dr. Durham was called by telephone and dressed the wound and did all that could be done to allay her sufferings. She was said to be getting along very well last night. CY KLONE.
